Call for Chapter Proposals
Proposal Submission Deadline: May 1, 2020
Understanding the Nature of Cyberbullies and CyberVictims: Prevention, Research and Theory

A book edited by Timothy Oblad (Texas A&M University-Kingsville)

Introduction

The premise of the book is to provide a comprehensive review of the field for a general audience (e.g., public advocates, educators, parents). The book will discuss and review empirical literature on the changes occurring involving cyberbullying over the last 15 years; current trajectories (e.g., laws, percentages, suicide-related rates); and identify individual characteristics that limit perpetration or put individuals at more risk as bullies as well as victims (e.g., self-esteem, posting more, sharing passwords, racially-charged messages, etc.). Other proposed chapters will also discuss prevention methods, guidance for parents and educators, review of preventative programs and/or use and application of theoretical frameworks and models to help identify key factors among cyberbullies and cyber victims. Other relevant topics are welcome for proposal.

Submission Procedure

Book chapter proposals should be submitted by May 1, 2020. Working themes or concepts may be communicated via email with the editor to help create content for a robust chapter. Proposals and working concepts should be sent directly to timothy.oblad@tamuk.edu use the subject heading Book Chapter Proposal. Once proposals are accepted, contributing authors will be provided with sample works, reference style guide, labeling instructions and a copyright form. Full submission of the chapter is due on August 1, 2020 also submitted via email to editor.

Please feel free to extend this invitation letter on our behalf to your esteemed and recommended colleague(s) active in this field of research.
